

Caleb Kleppner, a SubmergingMarkets™ Contributing Editor, spent five years as a Senior Analyst at the Center for Voting and Democracy (www.fairvote.org), educating and advocating for fair elections in both the public and private sectors. During this time he researched and wrote about all aspects of election administration. His comments to the Federal Election Commission were incorporated in the final Voting System Standards in 2002, and have also appeared in the plans of many states for implementation of the Help America Vote Act (HAVA). Kleppner also wrote San Francisco's Ranked Choice Voting Charter Amendment, and has worked with state and federal officials for the last two years to implement this system. He is currently an election consultant in private practice. He focuses on designing and administering elections for private organizations and companies. Caleb's current clients include a listener-sponsored radio station in New York City and a leading professional services company.

Before working to improve U.S. elections, Caleb did regulatory analysis for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, studied reforestation policy in Costa Rica, and did community development and ecology research in the Brazilian Amazon. He is fluent in Portuguese, French, Spanish and Swahili. Caleb has a B.S. in mathematics from Yale University and an M.S. in resource policy and management from Cornell University. He lives in New Haven, Connecticut.
